"Burn it! Destroy it! Stamp upon it!" shouted the audience. But Dr. Diaz shook his head. "No," he said, "we will not burn it; we a 9:00 am must not. This is the banner of a country which was once great. Her flag is about all she has in the world now. By this flag we have been wronged, scattered, slaughtered; but it is the flag of our fathers just the same. Do not forget that. Shall we throw it away as we did the Mauser, sword and the cannon? I say no. Let us do with this what will show that we can have pity for a fallen foe, who was once of our own people." Thereupon the speaker folded the flag closely and placed it near his heart.

"Let it remain there," he said, quietly while for a few moments a hush fell upon the congregation, more expressive of for-
